

Who runs the day?

Either you run the day, or the day runs you. -- Jim Rohn (US entrepreneur and motivational speaker).

At work... You have a brilliant plan on how to run that day. Now comes a short e-mail or a crisp phone call from your boss assigning you an urgent task. What should you do? If you're able to judge yourself that your boss' task is certainly more critical, of course, do that. If not, you should have a word with your boss to get your priorities right.

At home... You want to catch that music concert for the evening. Rest of the family wants to watch an entertaining movie for relaxation. What next? After a certain age, you tend to live for the family by giving up some of your personal interests. As long as the family members are happy, and you feel better as a result, such things are fine.

At shops... You want to get an outfit. You can ask your friends for an opinion on the color, material, pattern, and so on. Should you always buy a particular outfit that your friend wants you to? If you too like it, go for it. If not, pause and think... YOU are the one going to wear that outfit – be it a saree, salwar or a kurti. So, you make the final choice and feel comfortable with it.

Ideally, you should run the day...
At times, the day runs you. At work or at home, giving up for greater good is fine. However, for an outfit selection, do NOT let someone run your day.
