Strive not to be a success, but rather to be of value. - Albert Einstein

Einstein breathed his last on 18th April 1955 - exactly 60 years ago.

Einstein is a symbol of science and regarded as the brainiest physicist of the 20th century. We all know about his successes... He is a Nobel Prize winner for Physics in 1921; his theory of relativity was key for nuclear power; Most importantly, Einstein is 'intelligence personified'.

Was his story only filled with successes? Quite the opposite. As a kid, Einstein experienced speech difficulty; he was in financial doldrums in his 20s; while in Nazi Germany, he had his image published with the caption "Not yet hanged"*. Irrespective of those threats, Einstein always wanted to be of value to himself, his family, his community and the countries that supported him.

Nothing succeeds like success. However, success is just one of the outcomes from your efforts. Every failed effort adds plenty of value to your life. Another gifted inventor, Thomas Edison blew many filaments before getting that perfect electric bulb. If you learn from your efforts, that in itself is a great success!

Vasthree Silk always strives to bring the greatest value to our customers in terms of variety, quality and cost-effectiveness.
